Insularity of approaches to consideration migrants' cultural integration problem is stated. Traditional consideration of cultural integration process as acquisitions of new identity and cultural competence formation, the corresponding genera' orientation in new native culture showed mismatch with the real life facts. The integrative sociocultural-interdeterminist dialogical metaperspective of the cultural integration consideration in the context of an intersubjectivity formation as inevitable condition of intercultural mutual understanding is represented. According to the offered approach the problem field solution presumes the accounting of the culturally conditioned conscious-unconscious-existential and personality-situation-activity interdeterminants of interaction causing finding of dialogical equilibrium in the new quality which is not reduced to the simple sum of the parts composing it by analogy with the gestalt. Respectively, the cultural integration has to be considered not as transition from one state to another but as acquisition of new personality quality providing dialogical interdetermination Fast and the found cultures. The special role of problem existential aspect manifested in feeling of rejectedness from life, castawayness and hostility from a new cultural environment and lack of resources of self-sufficient solution of everyday life problems
